² By 1793, Philadelphia became the center of French refugee life in America. Due to the revolt of the enslaved in Haiti, enslaved black Saint Domingans were arriving at the Port of Philadelphia to the total of 818 in the summer and fall of 1793. (Gary B. Nash, "Reverberations of Haiti in American North: Black Saint Domingans in Philadelphia," PA History (1998), 44-73. I believe Ms. Ardica could have been one of those refugees. Nash also reports that the name "Felicite" was a new "commonly heard" name on the streets of Philadelphia after the influx of black Saint Domingans.

Ms. Ardica was a member of the Holy Trinity Roman Catholic Church where she was also called "Mary Jane." She was buried at BBG probably after she was refused burial at her churchyard because of the long standing racist stand on the matter by the older founding German parishioners. The attending physician did not know how old she was and wrote that his guess was that she was "upwards of 60-70."

³ Mr. Ayres was "run over by omnibus no. 12 belonging to John Leving."

⁴ Mr. Beck was born into slavery in Maryland and manumitted when he was 26 years of age after spending a year working on the construction of the U.S. Capitol Building. He traveled to Philadelphia circa 1800 where he started a family and a business. He immediately joined Bethel Church and became a trusted friend of Rev. Allen, a Bethel Class Leader and Church Sexton. In 1810, he was kidnapped and sold back into slavery.

He was enslaved on a plantation in Virginia very near the North Carolina border for two years. He was able to escape and made his way north on what would become a traditional Underground Railroad route. For the next 45 years he remained a stalwart of the Church and the African American community.

In 1847 The Ram's Horn, Frederick Douglass' newspaper, acknowledged and praised Beck as being a co-founder of the Underground Railroad and in the vanguard of establishing the fugitive slave network as a working system of stations, stations masters, cars and coaches. An "estimable" man worthy of respect and honor, the newspaper went on to write about Beck that he was one of a very few in the early years of the Underground Railroad to be a vigilant manager of the network and a keystone in its success.

In addition, Beck was the first chairman (1830) of the Free Produce Society of Philadelphia. The Society advocated for the purchase of food and textiles only raised by the labor of freemen and to boycott those items that were raised by the labors of enslaved men and women.

⁷ There does not exist a death certificate or Cemetery Return for Mr. Bliss. The March 14, 1848 edition of the Philadelphia Inquirer reported – "Large Funeral – A colored man, named John Bliss, a member of Frank Johnson's Band, was buried yesterday afternoon from his residence in Fitzwater Street above Sixth. The members of the colored Masonic Order, of which he was one, were out in full number, clothed in their rich regalia, while the band played appropriate and solemn airs. The coffin of the deceased was ornamented in a costly manner. Mr. Bliss was “interred in the burying ground in Queen Street above Fourth with several hundred persons being in attendance.”

⁸ The May 16, 1848 edition of the Philadelphia Inquirer reported that Rev. Boggs had been pastor of Bethel Church for “many years” and that his funeral was attended by “about one thousand persons,” which included clergymen and masons. “The deceased was much esteemed by his colored brethren,” observed the PI article.

In addition, Rev. Boggs was a member of the 1859 Columbus, Ohio, Christian Anti-Slavery Convention and the editor and publisher of the Northwestern Christian Magazine. He the first minister of the AME Church to travel to West Africa as a missionary. In 1824 he lived in Liberia and had to eventually return because he could not be supported.

⁹ Amelia Brown’s gravestone was unearthed at BBG on July 25, 2013 by archeologists. It is currently on display at Mother Bethel Church.

¹¹ One of Bethel AME Church’s original trustees.

¹² Family name also referred to as “Connors.” For more information see <http://bethelburyinggroundproject.com/>.

¹³ The Reverend Joseph Cox was pastor of Mother Bethel from 1834-1840. Originally a tanner he became a preacher and then an elder of Bethel AME Church in the 1820s. Bishop Cox was the brother of preacher Rebecca Cox Jackson.

Rev. Cox died 5 September 1843 at the age of sixty-five. His funeral was on 8 September at his late residence on Gaskill Street, a few doors below Fifth Street. His funeral procession to Queen Street was several blocks in length according to The Public Ledger (9 Sept 1843). In all likelihood he was buried next to the body of his son John who died of Tuberculosis at the age of nine in 1832.

For much more information on Rev. Cox see – Gifts of Power: The Writings of Rebecca Jackson, Black Visionary, Shaker by Rebecca Jackson. It is available at Google Books.

¹⁶ Mr. Davis’ funeral on March 8, 1850 was accompanied by a large funeral procession attended by fellow Masons in full uniform and accompanied by Hazard’s Brass Band; the coffin was carried by members of the order and was covered with a “handsome black cloth and bound with silver.” Many others also made up the procession. (Philadelphia Inquirer, 8 March 1850)

¹⁹ Ann Gibbs was the spouse of Shepherd Gibbs the Bethel Church sexton and Bethel Burying Ground manager. In the 1847 African American Census, Ms. Gibbs was reported to have been born free and indentured to Christian Heidi (sp.?) as a "small girl." Tragically, she was sold several times as a slave, but was eventually freed "by the intervention of some friends." She incurred $250 of legal fees, which she paid by "working it out." Ms. Gibbs was also reported to be in poor health.

²⁰ There is no official documented proof that Mr. Heppard is buried at BBG. There is no death certificate per se. By 1841 there were small black church graveyards in Southwark. However, it is unlikely that a person of this status would be buried in one of these. There is also a history of black Masons being buried at BBG. The following is from the January 19, 1841 edition of the Public Ledger. "Funeral with Masonic Honors _ Quite a stir was created yesterday in Southwark by a procession of colored masons, with music, colors, badges and various other insignia of their order, conveying one of their fellows to his grave. These ceremonies were in honor of Richard Heppard, late grand master of lodge No. 4."

MEDICAL GLOSSARY

Aphtha (Aphthae) - Small whitish ulcers appearing in the mouth.

Ague Intermittent fever - often used in the same sense as chill or rigor.

Ascites - A collection of serous fluid in the abdomen. Ascites proper is dropsy of the peritoneum; and is characterized by increased size of the abdomen, by fluctuation, and general signs of dropsy. It is rarely a primary disease.

Bilious Fever When a continual, remitting, or intermitting fever is accompanied with a frequent or copious evacuation of bile, either by vomit or stool, the fever is denominated bilious.

Bloody Flux - Dysentery involving a discharge of blood.

Brain Fever - Meningitis.

Cachexia - Weight loss, wasting of muscle, loss of appetite, and general debility that can occur during a chronic disease.

Cancrum Oris - Canker of the mouth; a fretted ulceration of the gums. It occurs principally in children.

Catarrh - An inflammatory affection of any mucous membrane, in which there are congestion, swelling, and an alteration in the quantity and quality of mucus secreted.

Catarrhal Fever A fever, either typhoid, nervous, or synochal, attended with symptoms of catarrh.

Epidemic Catarrh - Influenza

Pulmonary Catarrh – Bronchitis

Cerebritis - Inflammation of cerebrum or may indicate lead poisoning.

Child Bed Fever – See Puerperal Fever.

Cholera - Any disease characterized by repeated simultaneous purging and vomiting, with painful spasms of the stomach and bowels and occasional cramps of the external muscles; as commonly used, Asiatic cholera.

Cholera Infantum (aka Summer Complaint.) - A disease of infants; indigenous to the United States; prevalent during hot weather ordinarily characterized by excessive irritability of stomach, with purging. Fever of an obscurely remittent character; rapid emaciation; dry, harsh and wilted skin; excessive thirst; and in the latter stages; coma; the case terminating often with convulsions.

Convulsions – For the most part only a symptom of some other illness, such as, epilepsy, small pox, measles, teething, etc. Whatever greatly irritates or stimulates Croup - Any obstructive condition of the larynx or trachea, characterized by a hoarse, barking cough and difficult breathing occurring chiefly in infants and children. In the early-nineteenth century it was also called cynanche trachealis.

Coup de Soleil – Sunburn.

Debility - Abnormal bodily weakness or feebleness; decay of strength. This was a term descriptive of a patient's condition and of no help in making a diagnosis.

Delirium Tremens - Confusion, restlessness, terror and hallucinations due to alcoholism especially during withdrawal.

Dropsy - Edema or swelling of the whole body, or some part of it. It is distinguished by different names, according to the part affected, as the Anasarca, or a collection of water under the skin; the ascites, or a collection of water in the belly; hydrocephalus, or dropsy of the brain.

Erysipelas - Redness or inflammation of some part of the skin, with fever, inflammatory or Typhoid, and, generally, blisters on the affected part, and symptomatic fever.

Fever - Fevers are divided into continual, remitting, intermitting, and such as are attended with cutaneous eruption or topical inflammation, as the small-pox, erysipelas, &c. The fever is called acute when its progress is quick, and the symptoms violent; but when these are gentler, it is generally denominated slow. When livid spots reach a putrid state, the fever is called malignant. A Remitting fever differs from a continual only in degree. It has frequent increases and decreases, or exacerbations and remissions, but never wholly leaves the patient during the course of the disease. Intermitting fevers are those which, during the time that the patient may be said to be ill, have evident intervals or remissions of the symptoms.

Flux - A discharge; another term for diarrhea.

Hectic Fever - A slow consuming fever from some incurable and deep rooted disease.

Hematemesis - A vomiting of blood.

Hydrocephalus – In the 19th century usually due to tubercular meningitis and was marked by atrophy of the brain and convulsions.

Inanition - Exhaustion for want of nourishment. To die from inanition is to die from Exhaustion.

Inward Fits – or “Spasmodic Croup,” a Croup like condition in children. The child dies from suffocation due to the severity of the “fit” or spasm of the muscles in the throat. It is often seen as an early symptom of Hydrocephalus.

Marasmus- Malnutrition occurring in infants and young children, caused by an insufficient intake of calories or protein and characterized by thinness, dry skin, poor muscle development, and irritability. In the mid-nineteenth century, specific causes were associated with specific ages: In infants under twelve months old, the causes were believed to be unsuitable food, chronic vomiting, chronic diarrhea, and inherited syphilis. Between one and three years, marasmus was associated with rickets or cancer. After the age of three years, caseous (cheeselike) enlargement of the mesenteric glands (located in the peritoneal fold attaching the small intestine to the body wall) became a given cause of wasting. (See tabes mesenterica.) After the sixth year, chronic pulmonary tuberculosis appeared to be the major cause. Marasmus is now considered to be related to Kwashiorkor, a severe protein deficiency.

Puerperal Fever or Child Bed Fever - Infection after childbirth due to poor midwifery techniques especially antiseptic measures. Infection entered through injuries to the birth canal leading to septicemia and often to death. Occurs within 3 weeks of childbirth.

Putrid Fever - Typhus or diphtheria.

Putrid Sore Throat - Ulceration of the tonsils or diphtheria.

Ramollissement - A morbid softening of a tissue or organ.

Scarlatina - Scarlet fever. A contagious disease.

Scrofula - Primary tuberculosis of the lymphatic glands, especially those in the neck. A disease of children and young adults.

Softening of brain - Result of stroke or hemorrhage in the brain, with an end result of the tissue softening in that area.

Summer Complaint - dysentery or baby diarrhea caused by spoiled milk.

Tabes Mesenterica - Tuberculosis of lymph glands inside the abdomen. An illness of children. An archaic term no longer used.

Teething - The entire process which results in the eruption of the teeth. Nineteenth-century medical reports stated that infants were more prone to disease at the time of teething. Often teething was reported as a cause of death in infants. Perhaps they became susceptible to infections, especially if lancing was performed without antisepsis. Another explanation of teething as a cause of death is that infants were often weaned at the time of teething; perhaps they then died from drinking contaminated milk, leading to an infection, or from malnutrition if watered-down milk was given.

Typhoid Fever - An infectious, often-fatal disease, usually occurring in the summer months--characterized by intestinal inflammation and ulceration. Synonym: enteric fever.

Typhus - An acute, infectious disease transmitted by lice and fleas. The epidemic or classic form is louse borne; the endemic or murine is flea borne. Synonyms: typhus fever, malignant fever (in the 1850s), jail fever, hospital fever, ship fever, putrid fever, brain fever, bilious fever, spotted fever, petechial fever, camp fever.

Worm Fever – Not caused by worms. It is likely that the cause of death was an unrecognized fever (possibly one where there would be diarrhea like typhoid and worms would be passed) in someone who just happened to have worms.
